June 4-8, 2023

See You in Cartagena!

Present your scientific work at ISPRM 2023, the 17th ISPRM World Congress, the 31st Colombian Association of PM&R meeting, and the 3rd Ibero-American meeting of PMR, June 4 - 8 in Cartagena, Colombia.

Submission options: Case Report, Case series, Observational Studies (Cohort and case and control studies), Diagnostic studies, Randomized Controlled Trials, Systematic Reviews, Metaanalysis, Economic studies, Qualitative studies, Clinical Practice Guidelines. Accepted abstracts will be presented in two formats, Scientific Paper Oral Presentations or Poster Presentations.

SCIENTIFIC PAPER PRESENTATIONS: The intent of these oral presentations is to convey the nature of high-quality research practice to the meeting participants. Papers for this session should be experimental in nature, and will be chosen not only for their intrinsic scientific merit, but also, for their educational value in illustrating the research process.

POSTER PRESENTATIONS: Each poster will be presented in the poster area, an exhibit providing a forum for a one on one, in-depth discussion using narrative and visual material to display and communicate the objectives, methods, results, and conclusions of a specific study. Use of visual material such as photographs, charts, and diagrams are very important. The Presenting Author, as the resource person or consultant, should be present at specified times on the days of presentation to engage in discussion with interested individuals.

GENERAL RULES

Abstracts may be submitted for either scientific paper or poster presentations. The Congress Scientific Committee will determine whether abstracts will be accepted based on blind review. They will respect the authors' preference but reserve the right to assign the category and make the final decision. Submitted abstracts can be modified before the submission deadline.

Abstract Topics: Abstracts must be allocated to a specific topic. You will need to select the topic most suited to your abstract from this list.
Research Study Abstracts must be structured to summarize the research objectives, design, results, and conclusions. Objectives should contain the background and purpose of the study. Design section should explain key methods, procedures, interventions, and any controls in the study - allowing the reader to infer limitations of the data.

Case Report Abstracts must be structured in the following four categories: Case Diagnosis, Case Description, Discussion, and Conclusions. Case Reports and series cases can be presented only as posters.

Abstracts containing statements such as ‘data to be presented’ or ‘the significance of the findings will be discussed’ are not acceptable. Conclusions should explain the meaning and importance of the results, and perhaps state any new questions identified.
